

A man running from his past. A woman facing a new future. A voyage neither will forget.

While they were young religion, pride, betrayal, and mistrust twisted the lives of Steven Ray and Mckenzie Kelly. Now twenty years later everything has fallen apart—again.

Then it's the Bourne Supremacy meet Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade as twelve passengers and crew embark on a thrilling adventure with Steven (DR) Ray, now a world famous archaeologist and confident captain of his own boutique cruise. But their yacht is randomly marked entering the Suez Canal, leaving the Mediterranean, by unseen proxies of a rogue political regime. After sailing through the canal and reaching Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, their first port, the general's pay-for-play terrorists and pirates set his plan in motion. And failure isn't a choice.

Not knowing they've sailed into a deadly game of political cat-and-mouse, DR and a woman passenger with her own secrets battle their demons, and soon begin enduring endless sleepless nights of frightening dreams. Dreams that point to a dangerous destiny, nurturing a secret romance that quickly buds, against cruise rules.

As the pirates close in, their prize just within reach, can DR let go of his past and embrace his destiny? Or will they all go down with the ship?
